PART I: Literary Analysis

Read the excerpt below in the box on the left from Irish philosopher John O'Donohue's work Anam Cara. Then complete the analytic critical-thinking questions in the boxes on the right.

An interesting question to ask at night is, What did I really see this day?... It is a startling truth that how you see and what you see determine how and who you will be... Ask yourself, "What way do I behold the world?..."

To the fearful eye, all is threatening... To the greedy eye, everything can be possessed... To the judgmental eye, everything is [put on trial, examined, and sentenced]... To the resentful eye, everything is [seen with envy and bitterness]... To the indifferent eye, [everything is blab and uninspiring]... To the inferior eye, everyone else is greater... To the loving eye, everything is... full of invitation, possibility, and depth. The loving eye can even coax pain, hurt, and violence toward [transformation] and renewal...

Explain: What is O'Donohue's main message/idea?

Extend: Create 2 new "eyes," and discuss their sight.

Evaluate: Self-assess... With what eye do you see?

PART II: Comparative Interpretation

In Box B, interpret the image of the trees through the lens of the Socrates story.

A: Historical Socrates. The ancient Greek philosopher Socrates was executed by the rulers of Athens after being convicted of "corrupting the youth." Socrates was known to question young people, asking them to justify their belief in the gods given that they could not see the gods. He aimed for people to be free-thinking independents rather than sheep who merely accepted what was told.

B: Figurative Socrates:

PART III: Summarizing Plato's "Allegory of the Cave"

Go to the class website (www.prather.yolasite.com). Click on the WH tab. Beneath the overview of the Philosophy Unit are two videos about the ancient Greek philosopher Plato's "Allegory of the Cave." Watch them!!! Over and over and over again if you have to. When finished, write or draw a summary of the allegory in the space below.

PART IV: Interpreting via Plato's theory about objects and forms.

Re-examine the image on the left. The image shows you an object – trees. Then on the right try to discuss the form – treeness. What are the qualities of a perfect tree???

OBJECT: Trees

FORM: Treeness

PART V: Extending/Connecting

Return to the muMs poem. Re-annotate in places where you observe Plato in the poet's work!
